

DADA MAP OF THE ART IN BERLIN'S 12 DISTRICTS

① Spandau

Bröhan-Museum
Dedicated to the decorative arts of the modern period, particularly Art Nouveau and Art Deco

Maurice Blaïs
La Maison Moderne, 1900
lithograph

② Reinickendorf

Hannah-Höch-Haus
The former home and garden of one of the most influential artists of the Dada movement. She moved to this remote location after being denounced a "cultural Bolshevik" by the Nazis.

Hannah Höch
Untitled (From an Ethnographic Museum), 1930 paper collage

③ Pankow

Museum in der Kulturbrauerei
Museum devoted to evoking life under the German Democratic Republic, i.e. what was "East Berlin" from 1949-1990. "Bizzare Cities" was an informal journal run by the alternative art scene of East Berlin dealing with censorship laws under the GDR.

Track Wendisch
Untitled Self-Portrait for the magazine "Bizarre Cities," 1988 oil on cardboard

④ Lichtenberg

Mies van der Rohe Lemke House
The last home built by the Bauhaus architect before he fled to the US from the Nazis. Today it functions as a gallery for modern and contemporary art.

José Heerkens
L2 Letter on two sides, 2018 oil on linen

⑤ Marzahn-Hellersdorf

Marzahn-Hellersdorf Museum
Modern museum that seeks to tell the history of the Marzahn-Hellersdorf district.

Johanna Jura
Bronze and Ceramics exhibit, 2018 ceramic sculpture

⑥ Charlottenburg-Wilmersdorf

Berggruen Museum
Heinz Berggruen's collection of Modern art classics featuring the work of: Klee, Matisse, and Picasso.

Pablo Picasso
The Yellow Pullover
oil on canvas

The Dada movement, or Dadaism, is a twentieth century European art and literary movement that emerged in reaction to the horrors of WWI.

Originating in Zürich, Switzerland, it made its way to Berlin at the height of the war in 1918.

Berlin artists, Hannah Höch and Raoul Hausmann, who used Dada to express communist sympathies, developed the technique of photomontage collage that became a defining characteristic of the Dada movement.

This map is inspired by the contributions Berlin has made to Dadaism and the history of art at large.

⑦ Mitte

Neues Museum
Located on Museum Island, the neoclassical building houses Egyptian art, prehistoric objects, and classical antiquities.

Thutmose
Bust of Nefertiti, 1345 BC
limestone and stucco

⑧ Friedrichshain-Kreuzberg

East Side Gallery
An open-air gallery of murals painted by 105 artists from all over the world. These works are directly on the remnants of the Berlin Wall, functioning as a monument to the fall of the wall in 1990.

Dmitri Vrubel
My God, Help Me to Survive This Deadly Love, 1990 graffiti

⑨ Steglitz-Zehlendorf

Lars Friedrich
A contemporary art gallery currently featuring a solo mixed media exhibition by Sam Pulitzer titled "Do Displays of Solidarity Make you Cry?"

Sam Pulitzer should the snow that has melted be praised?, 2018 color pencil, xerographic toner, acrylic on paper

⑩ Tempelhof-Schöneberg

Gemäldegalerie
A museum that houses a collection of renowned 13th to 18th century European art, most of which belongs to the Berlin State Museums. It most famously features the work of Caravaggio, Albrecht Dürer, Rembrandt, Raphael, and Titian.

Caravaggio
Amor Vincit Omnia, 1601-1602
oil on canvas

⑪ Neukölln

KINDL Center for Contemporary Art
Located in a former brewery, this art gallery holds a large exhibition space for both local and international contemporary artists

Shirin Shahbazi
Palme, 2014
two-colored lithography on Zerkall Büten paper

⑫ Treptow-Köpenick

Falkenberg Garden City
Inspired by the English idea of Garden City, architect Bruno Taut built 128 single family homes that are known today for their bright and bold color schemes.

Bruno Taut
Falkenberg Garden City, 1913-1916.